Cameron University

in Lawton, Oklahoma

Cameron University provides diverse and dynamic students a quality education. The university fosters a student-centered academic environment that combines innovative classroom teaching with experiential learning. For students who want the full college experience, but without the worries of larger, more crowded campuses, Cameron offers small classes with plenty of face-to-face interactions with professors.

Cameron University is the perfect destination for not just Canadians, but all international students. A good portion of the more than 4,000 students and student-athletes enrolled at CU are international students. Cameron strives to be above the national average for ethnic and geographic diversity in its students and faculty, allowing students to learn from and work alongside a wide variety of racial and ethnic groups.

Cameron University offers nearly 50 different degrees at the associate, bachelor's and master's levels. With affordable tuition costs and a high acceptance rate, students from around the world take advantage of CU's valuable education system and convenient residential space on campus.

Cameron University is located in Lawton, Oklahoma, near the U.S. Army's Fort Sill military base, which provides a richly diverse culture and friendly population to contribute to the welcome feeling that international students experience.

Cameron faculty and staff prepare students for professional success, responsible citizenship, lifelong learning and meaningful contributions to a rapidly changing world. Above all, Cameron's highest priority is providing its students a valuable degree that is affordable. CU welcomes transfers from other colleges and universities, and scholarship opportunities are available.

Over the years, a substantial number of international students, faculty and staff have found a new home at Cameron University.
